

POLICE MEMORIAL.

In the early part of this year Mr Harry Grugeon, J.P., Superintendent of the south western police district of New South Wales, met with a fatal buggy accident, and the members of the New South Wales police force have decided to commemorate his memory by the erection of a monument over his grave in the Deniliquin cemetery. The design selected is a very choice one, being a pedestal with carved drapery, surmounted by a beautifully carved figure representing an angel with arms extended dropping flowers on the grave beneath. The monument is supported by a base of Harcourt granite, with two sets of kerlings of the same stone. Marble posts with marble kerbings, neatly moulded, take the place of the customary iron railing while the inside of the grave is to be covered with black and white marble tiles. The inscription reads as follows:—“In memory of Harry Grugeon, Esq., J.P., Superintendent of Police, Deniliquin, died 10th January, 1911, as the result of a buggy accident. Aged 56 years: Thy will be done, O Lord. Erected as a mark of esteem by the officers, non commissioned officers and men of the New South Wales police.” These letters have been cut out and filled with lead, thus making the inscription of a lasting character. Messrs J. B. Wilson and Co, monumental masons, Mitchell-street, Bendigo, have been entrusted with the work, which is now in course of preparation.
